

A Message to Channellers from Michael of Nebadon – Have you made a Typo?

There are many occasions when I am speaking personally to people when they don't actually hear what I am saying. There are those whom listen, and others who don't. Some hear a percentage and make up the rest, while even more cop a deaf 'un as have heard said.

Even with the closest and most diligent of my channelling partners, there is the potential for mistakes, for even with the slightest change of a two or three letter word, the meaning can be vastly different. Some of the best telepathic channellers think they are quite perfect thank you, and yet the errors creep in.

This is not a criticism of your own work, nor of any other's either; just a general warning to everyone engaged upon this work to be extra careful at this time. For example; if an individual accidentally typed the word had instead of has, then an event becomes of the past, instead of being in the future. If that were related to a mainstream geological event, then clearly this could end up being very serious for people judging what to do next for themselves and their families.

You in the material realm on Earth are subject to many forms of pressures, including time pressure; so the temptation to tap out a message and go to work or get to bed as soon as possible, can make the individual in too much of a hurry to get the task done. Even when reading the message through several times after it is transcribed, there exists the potential to get it wrong again, and how many messages have contained there when it should have been their, and vice versa?

This then becomes a quality issue, and it may be that the person reading the published message will think it is not authentic, simply because of a simple transcription or typographical error. That could mean one less person saved and turned towards the light.

Why am I issuing this message through you, when there's any number of outlets with my material, to whom I could address this issue? Well My Son, you are now set up in an independent capacity and beholden to nobody but Me and my Spiritual Team, and so as you are existing in a small and quiet corner of the Internet, issuing this to you will not devour channelling time with others who are required to issue critical and urgent mission updates, which are read by a large number of people everywhere. I will make it my business to attract those to Erethea who do this work, and they will then read and pass the content of this message around to where it matters.

Just post it as normal please, and I will do the rest.

With you I have been using the lesser title of Michael of Nebadon, but for those channellers who will come to read this, I proclaim that I AM Christ Michael Aton and I place my seal upon these words. All I ask of you dear ones, is that you take a little more time to channel and transcribe your received messages, before you push the publish button.

That's all Vincent my dear, and once this is published you must get some rest.

This is a message from Michael of Nebadon telepathically transmitted through Vince on 25th May 2010.
